

Brandon Mitchell Jackson-Lane

June 21, 1992 - January 2, 2022

“Who the heck are you? Well, let me introduce myself!”

Brandon Mitchell Jackson Lane “ Bj” blessed hardworking father and loving devoted mother, Bennie Murl Lane Jr and DeLisa Joy Jackson and interrupted the lives of his oldest siblings June 21, 1992, in “Loud City” Oklahoma City, OK. True to his role as the “da baby” Bj was definitely a Momma’s baby in denial. Point in case made by flower tattoo with Delisa tatted on his left arm. Bj was born in a God-fearing family where he was introduced to Christ and developed a personal relationship with the creator.

PrettyBoi

Bj attended Townsed elementary and Kerr Jr. High. Big on Love and Loyalty he stayed connected with all his childhood friends. Bj later graced the hallways of Central Middle school and Moore Highschool. Self-proclaimed “scrawny” Bj was decent in sports and perfect for wrestling, but he was not taking any chances. Bj found his passion in the arts! From drama and theatre, playing the trumpet in the band creative writing and best known for his undeniably raw talent to rock the mic. Natural born leaders skills Bj was an active member as president in Decca. These skills were divinely used as one of the founding fathers of a brotherhood that would last a lifetime known as WantedBoyz Ent. Wbe was not only a group of multi-talented lyrical geniuses but a movement among classmates and peers as they gained supporters and fans. “Homies all around me so I think its time I lead them.” In age and size, he was the lil brother, but when he was not a spoiled baby, he often played the big brother role motivating and leading the tribe. He convinced classmates and fans to wear purple on Wednesdays at school. "Where my swag come from? Mardi Gra beads?" Now of course you can't mention pretty boi without mentioning swag. BJ prided himself on not only fresh to death, but in his own unique fashion that could not be duplicated. BJ was the epitome of swag. "I need my insulin, Im diabetic". BJ was diagnosed with diabetes in his pre-teen years. "And they want to see me fall, but I know is ball and every time I think I am short I feel so tall. I bring myself up, I think I am the best. No, I know I am the best!" In spite of illness BJ lived a life full of love, family, friend, music, and wild adventures. He worked or terrorized McDonalds and Sonic while attending Oklahoma Community College while studying business marketing. He later applied skills at the company, "Zip Fizz" where he was consecutively a top salesman in the state of Oklahoma. "As the days turn night and the weather gets cold, will somebody help me out, tell me how to get home. I gotta get home." Often seen in army fatigues or camo print BJ went from a young man to a soldier as complications rose with illness. "Diabetic, so I pray I have no limbs missing." Even through all his struggles and wanting to give up, BJ fought a good fight, along with the support of his parents, with lots of love and determination. BJ fought not for his life, but for love. He made sure to reach out to all loved ones, letting them know he loved them dearly. Caring on his love, energy, and spirit, is his father Benny Murl Lane, mother Delisa Joy Jackson, older brothers Jurrelle Johnson & Broderick Johnson, and his battle-buddy and partner in crime, sister Quintisha Jackson and Jerrod Sanders.
